As a state court judge, I think publishing "MemoDispo" opinions will denigrate published opinions that are carefully considered and crafted by the Appellate Courts. "MemoDispos" only resolve a specific case and to cite them will require the trial courts to review the original case to see how the "MemoDispo" case applies to any given case pending before the trial court. This will demand too much time and effort on behalf of trial judges. Truncated decisions have no place being cited to trial courts.

sincerely,

NA "Tito" Gonzales
