I. Introduction

The Advisory Committee on Criminal Rules met on April 18, 2016, in Washington, D.C. Draft minutes from the meeting are attached.

This report presents three action items. The Committee unanimously recommends publication of the following proposed amendments for public comment:

- (1) Rule 49 (filing and service);
- (2) Rule 45(c) (conforming amendment); and
- (3) Rule 12.4 (government disclosure of organizational victims).

The report also briefly discusses several information items. The Committee will study further the following proposed amendments and has appointed subcommittees for each:

- (1) Procedural protections for cooperating defendants (CACM recommendations);
- (2) Rule 5(d) of the Rules Governing 2255 Actions (right to file a reply); and

(3) Rule 16 (discovery in complex cases).

Finally, as noted below, the Committee decided that it will not, at this time, pursue several other suggested amendments.

II. Action Item: Rule 49

The Criminal Rules Committee submits proposed amendments to Rule 49 governing service and filing in criminal cases, with the recommendation that the amendments be published for public comment. Parallel amendments are before the Standing Committee from the Civil, Bankruptcy, and Appellate Rules Committees.

A. Background

The proposed amendments to Criminal Rule 49 grew out of a Standing Committee initiative to adapt the rules of procedure to the modernization of the courts' electronic filing system. A subcommittee composed of representatives from each of the advisory committees concluded that the rules governing the procedure in civil, criminal, bankruptcy, and appellate cases should be amended to require, rather than allow, electronic filing and service, with appropriate exceptions. The Standing Committee endorsed that recommendation and charged the advisory committees to work closely together and coordinate the parallel amendments on e-filing and service.

Because Rule 49(b) and (d) currently provide that service and filing be made in the "manner provided for a civil action," the threshold question facing the Criminal Rules Committee was whether to retain this linkage to the Civil Rules or to draft a comprehensive Criminal Rule on filing and service. At its September 2015 meeting, the Criminal Rules Committee unanimously approved a motion instructing the Rule 49 Subcommittee to prepare a stand-alone rule. Members emphasized the different interests and policies at stake in civil and criminal litigation: criminal cases and proceedings under § 2255 involve heightened due process concerns that should be reflected in the Criminal Rules governing filing and service. Extending the Civil Rule's new presumptive e-filing requirements to pro se defendants and prisoners in criminal cases, the Committee concluded, would be particularly problematic. Members also noted that prosecutors, defense lawyers, and pro se defendants would benefit from having the rules on filing and service included in the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, rather than having to consult two different sets of procedural rules.

However, in drafting the new stand-alone rule, the Committee recognized that the proposed language should replicate that used in the Civil Rule when possible to avoid raising questions about the meaning or scope of the existing language in the Civil Rules. Differences in language must be rooted in differences between civil and criminal cases or differences in existing Rules of Civil and Criminal Procedure. To ensure that the proposed Rule 49 replicated the revised provisions in the Civil Rules as closely as possible, the Criminal Rules Committee worked with representatives of the Civil Rules Committee throughout the process. Members of the Civil Rules Committee and Reporters from the Civil, Appellate, and Bankruptcy Committees participated in deliberations, and the style consultants worked diligently to harmonize the phrasing and structure of the proposals. Moreover, the Committee approved the amendment at its April 2016 meeting with the understanding that the chair and reporters might need to make additional minor changes to ensure uniformity with proposals from the other committees before submission to the Standing Committee (and, as always, to incorporate any changes made on the recommendation of the style consultants).<sup>1</sup>

B. Selected Features of Proposed Criminal Rule 49

Because most of the provisions on service and filing in proposed Criminal Rule 49 are identical to the provisions on service and filing in proposed Civil Rule 5, this report will focus on the differences. Generally, the proposed Criminal Rule departs from the proposed amendment to Rule 5 only where the Committee was persuaded that a departure was warranted by a difference between civil and criminal cases, or a difference between the criminal and civil rules themselves.

1. Organization and Structure.

In both Civil Rule 5 and Criminal Rule 49, the provisions on service precede those dealing with filing. Within those subsections, however, the proposed amendments to Rules 5 and 49 differ on the order in which they address electronic and nonelectronic means of filing and service. The proposed amendments to Rule 49 address electronic means first. Because most filing and service in criminal cases is through CM/ECF, the Criminal Rules Committee concluded that a new stand-alone rule providing instructions for filing and service should lead with instructions on electronic filing and service. Also, addressing electronic means in (a)(3) first provides needed context for the term “nonelectronic,” which follows in the caption to (a)(4). And, importantly, placing the subsection on electronic means of service first highlights the specific restriction on use of CM/ECF by unrepresented parties. For unrepresented persons using the rule, the placement of electronic before nonelectronic service makes it crystal clear that <sup>1</sup> A number of such minor changes were made to the proposal after the April meeting of the Criminal Rules Committee, each approved by the Chair, Subcommittee Chair, and reporters:

- (1) conforming (a)(3)(A) & (B) to the civil rule phrasing (“learns that it did not reach the person”);
- (2) changing the caption of 49(a)(1) from “When Required” to “What is Required”;
- (3) changing the phrase “unrepresented party” to “party not represented by an attorney” in several locations;
- (4) changing “using the court’s electronic filing system” to “filing it with the court’s ...”;
- (5) rephrasing the cross references in subsections (c) and (d) to read “as required by” Rule 49(a);
- (6) relocating the phrase “on each party” in subsection (d) to earlier in the sentence; and
- (7) changing phrasing in (b)(3)(A) to “the court must allow nonelectronic filing for good cause.”

unrepresented parties must follow different rules when it comes to CM/ECF. Because the Criminal Rules Committee was writing on a clean slate, the proposed amendment did not require reordering of preexisting numbering or lettering of these provisions, which can pose difficulties for researching applications of its provisions.

In contrast, the drafters of the Civil Rules were not writing on a clean slate. Civil Rule 5 now begins with the traditional means of nonelectronic filing. Electronic filing, which is a relatively recent phenomenon, was added at the end of the list of means of filing. Putting electronic filing first would have required relettering the provisions of Rule 5(d), and the Civil Rules Committee concluded that the reasons for placing electronic provisions first did not outweigh the potential downsides of renumbering and relettering Rule 5.

The consensus view of the Committees, Reporters, and Style Consultants was that each Committee had valid reasons for the difference in structure and the different order in which the forms of service were listed posed no problem. In contrast to the use of different terminology, which might raise interpretative questions, a different order of the subsections would cause no mischief.

The Criminal Rule also incorporates in a single paragraph—(b)(1)—the language from existing Civil Rule 5 regarding the timing of filing and certificate of service. The proposed Civil Rule breaks the current single paragraph into two separate subdivisions. The consensus of the Committees, Reporters, and Style Consultants was that on this point a difference between the civil and criminal rule is appropriate. Because the single paragraph in the proposed Criminal Rule is shorter than the corresponding portion of the Civil Rule, which also addresses the filing of discovery under Civil Rule 26, subdividing the single paragraph in Rule 49 was unnecessary and indeed was opposed by the Style Consultants.

Unlike Civil Rule 5(b)(2)(E), proposed new Criminal Rule 49 contains separate provisions for service through the court's electronic filing system and electronic service by other means with written consent. The structure of the Criminal Rule differs because the substantive rule regarding electronic filing by an unrepresented party differs, as explained below.

And, unlike Civil Rule 5, proposed Criminal Rule 49 distinguishes structurally (as well as substantively) between parties (the prosecution and defense) and nonparties. This is reflected structurally in (c), "Service and Filing By Nonparties," which has no counterpart in Rule 5. The various substantive differences are discussed below in sections 2(a) and (b).

Finally, the proposed Criminal Rule contains two other provisions, not found in Civil Rule 5, that incorporate provisions found elsewhere in the Rules of Civil Procedure. These provisions will be needed when the link between the Civil and Criminal Rules is severed. They are described below in section 2(c).

2. Substantive Differences

a. Filing and Service by Unrepresented Parties

The first major substantive difference from the Civil Rule is that under the proposed Criminal Rule an unrepresented party must file nonelectronically unless allowed to file electronically by court order or local rule. In contrast, under the proposed amendment to Civil Rule 5, an unrepresented party may be “required” to file electronically by a court order or local rule that allows reasonable exceptions. The need for different approaches to electronic filing by unrepresented parties was the main reason the Criminal Rules Committee decided that a stand-alone criminal rule was required.

As noted during the Criminal Rules Committee’s report to the Standing Committee at its January 2016 meeting, electronic filing by pro se prisoners presents significant challenges. Pro se parties filing papers under the criminal rules generally lack the means to e-file or receive electronic confirmations, yet must be provided access to the courts under the Constitution.<sup>2</sup>

b. Filing and Service by Nonparties

The second substantive difference from the Civil Rule concerns filing and service by nonparties. Media representatives and crime victims are probably the most frequent nonparty filers, but there are others, including nonparty motions for the return of property under Rule 41(g), material witnesses who are detained under 18 U.S.C. § 3144, persons seeking disclosure of grand jury material under Rule 6, records custodians moving to quash subpoenas, amici filing at the district court level, and bail sureties.

The Committee concluded that good reasons support requiring all nonparties, represented or not, to file and serve nonelectronically in the absence of a court order or local rule to the contrary. First, the architecture of the current CM/ECF system allows only the prosecution and defendant(s) to file in a criminal case. Moreover, nonparties generally have a distinctive interest only in certain aspects of a criminal case, and it may not be desirable for them to be served with pleadings and filings that are unrelated to those aspects of the case. Some nonparties may prefer a default rule of nonelectronic filing. Some, particularly victims, provide information to the court that they may not wish to have shared with the parties. A default of nonelectronic filing helps protect those interests. If a district decides that it would prefer to adopt procedures that would allow all represented media, victim, or other filers to use its electronic filing system, that would remain an option by local rule.

<sup>2</sup> For this reason, the Committee also expressed some concern about the application in § 2254 cases of language allowing local rules to require unrepresented parties to file electronically. Such language was added to Civil Rule 5 in order to provide authority for some existing local rules that require inmates in certain prisons to submit their petitions to staff in the prison library, who then scan the papers and file them electronically. In response to the Committee’s concerns, the proposed amendment to Rule 5 was revised to state that local rules requiring pro se parties to file must allow reasonable exceptions.

This policy choice is reflected in subsection (c), “Service and Filing By Nonparties,” which has no counterpart in the Civil Rules. Subsection (c) also serves another important function. The introductory clause—“A nonparty may serve and file a paper only if doing so is required or permitted by law”—makes it clear that the provisions describing how nonparties must file or serve do not expand the right of nonparties to participate in criminal prosecutions.

c. Provisions Imported from Other Civil Rules

Proposed Rule 49 contains two provisions that do not appear in Civil Rule 5, but were imported from other Civil Rules. The first comes from Civil Rule 11. The Criminal Rules Committee concluded severing the link to the Civil Rules without adding the signature provision of Civil Rule 11(a) to Rule 49 would either create<sup>3</sup> or maintain an existing gap in the Criminal Rules. Nothing else in the Criminal Rules requires that the contact information specified in Civil Rule 11(a) be included as part of a filing. Proposed Rule 49(b)(4) fills this gap by replicating the language presently found in Civil Rule 11(a). That language has been restyled, and the word “party” changed to “person” in order to accommodate filings by nonparties.

Proposed Rule 49(c) also substitutes the language from Civil Rule 77(d)(1), governing the clerk’s duty to serve notice of orders, for the command in the existing Rule that the clerk serve notice “in a manner provided for in a civil action.”<sup>4</sup>

d. Other Differences

The Committee also noted a few other minor differences between the proposed amendments to Rule 49 and Civil Rule 5, which it concluded were justified and unlikely to give rise to any interpretative questions or difficulties.

- i.* The language describing what must be served was retained from existing Rule 49(a). The current language—which is familiar to and well understood by practitioners and judges—now varies from the language of Civil Rule 5(a)(1). The Civil Rule refers to types of papers that are not filed in criminal cases. There was no intention to change the scope of the service requirement in criminal cases, <sup>3</sup> A few courts have assumed Civil Rule 11(a) may be applicable in criminal cases, presumably as part of the “manner” of filing referenced in Rule 49(d).

<sup>4</sup> Proposed Rule 49(c) omits the phrase “who is not in default for failing to appear,” which does not apply in criminal cases, and substitutes “Rule 49(a)” for Rule 77’s reference to “Rule 5(b).”

and the Committee was concerned that revising the wording might generate uncertainty or work an unintended change.

- ii. The language concerning service on the attorney of a represented party is retained from existing Rule 49(b). It too differs slightly from that in Civil Rule 5. Unlike the criminal provision under which service on the attorney is required whenever service is required by “these” (i.e. criminal) “rules or a court order,” the civil provision is restricted to service under “this rule,” (i.e., Rule 5). The Note to the 2001 Amendments to Civil Rule 5 suggests that the provision on serving attorneys in the Civil Rule was restricted so that it would apply only to service made under Rules 5(a) and 77(d) and not to service under Civil Rules 4, 4.1, 45(b), and 71A(d)(3). Absent some evidence that the present scope of Criminal Rule 49(b) is presenting difficulties in criminal practice, there appears to be no basis for restricting it in the same way that the provision in the Civil Rule has been restricted.
- iii. Rule 49(e)’s phrasing (“A paper filed electronically in compliance with a local rule is written or in writing under these rules”) has always been slightly different than Civil Rule 5(d) (“A paper filed electronically is a written paper for purposes of these rules.”). The words “or in writing,” were retained because they appear in so many Rules of Criminal Procedure, including Rules 47(b), 11(a)(2), 23(b), and other rules that require the defendant to waive other important procedural rights “in writing.”

e. Provisions in Civil Rules that Were Not Included.

To ensure that every deviation in the proposed amendment from the Civil Rules provisions on filing and service was identified and justified as necessary to accommodate criminal cases, the Committee examined each aspect of Civil Rule 5. The Committee also reviewed all of the other Civil Rules that might be thought to govern the “manner” of filing or service and thus fall within the rules incorporated by Criminal Rule 49(b) or (d).

Language that the Committee decided was not pertinent to criminal cases was not included in the proposed amendment to Rule 49. For example, the language in Civil Rule 5(a)(2) was not imported because there are no default judgments in criminal prosecutions or § 2255 cases. The language in Civil Rule 5(a)(3) was not imported because criminal actions are not “begun by seizing property.” (Criminal forfeiture proceedings are governed by Criminal Rule 32.2.) Also the language about serving numerous defendants in Civil Rule 5(c) was not imported because it does not apply. In a criminal prosecution, even when there are many defendants, each requires notice and must be served.

Where there were detailed provisions in the current Criminal Rules addressing matters also covered in the Civil Rules, the Committee concluded those detailed provisions rebutted any possible implication that the Civil Rule currently governs in criminal cases. For example, Civil Rule 65.1 governs service of motions to enforce a surety's liability. Criminal Rule 46(f)(3)(C) covers the same ground and rebuts any implication that Rule 49 incorporates Rule 65.1.

III. Action Item: Conforming Amendment to Rule 45

The Committee also recommends publication of a conforming amendment to Rule 45(c) in order to revise cross references that would be made obsolete by the proposed amendment of Rule 49. Although technical and conforming amendments do not require publication, in this case the Committee recommends simultaneous publication of the proposed amendments to Rule 49 and the conforming amendment to Rule 45(c).

Criminal Rule 45(c)—which governs time computation and closely matches the Civil, Bankruptcy, and Appellate Rules—now provides for additional time to take action after service by certain means authorized by Civil Rule 5. In tandem with parallel changes in the other rules, an amendment to Rule 45(c) eliminating extra time after service by electronic means is now pending before Congress. The pending amendment also incorporates cross references to the sections of Civil Rule 5 listing certain authorized modes of service.

The proposed amendment to Rule 49 imports the service rules now referenced in Rule 45(c) into Rule 49(a), rendering the existing cross references to Civil Rule 5 obsolete. The conforming amendment would replace the obsolete references to Civil Rule 5 with references to the corresponding new subsections in Rule 49(a).

The Committee recommends publication of this amendment when the proposed amendments to Rule 49 are published. Publishing the proposed amendments together will foreclose public comments suggesting that such a correction will be required.

IV. Action Item: Rule 12.4

The Criminal Rules Committee recommends publication of an amendment to Rule 12.4, which governs the parties' disclosure statements. Rule 12.4(a)(2) requires the government to identify organizational victims to assist judges in complying with their obligations under the Judicial Code of Conduct. Rule 12.4 was a new rule added in 2002. The Committee Note states that “[t]he purpose of the rule is to assist judges in determining whether they must recuse themselves because of a ‘financial interest in the subject matter in controversy.’ Code of Judicial Conduct, Canon 3C(1)(c) (1972).” Prior to 2009, the Code of Judicial Conduct treated any victim entitled to restitution as a party, and the committee note stated that the purpose of the disclosures required by Rule 12.4 was to assist judges in determining whether to recuse. In 2009, however, the Code of Judicial Conduct was amended. It no longer treats any victim who may be entitled to restitution as a party, and it requires disclosure only when the judge has an interest “that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceedings.”

The proposed amendment to Rule 12.4(a) brings the scope of the required disclosures in line with the 2009 amendments, allowing the court to relieve the government of the burden of making the required disclosures upon a showing of “good cause.” The amendment will avoid the need for burdensome disclosures when there are numerous organizational victims, but the impact of the crime on each is relatively small. For example, nearly every organization in the United States could be affected by price fixing concerning a widely-used product, such as a computer program. But each victim would suffer only a very minor harm from a price increase that might be pennies for each product purchased. In such cases, it seems unnecessarily burdensome (even if possible) for the government even to name every corporation, partnership, union, or other organizational victim. The amendment allows the government to show good cause to be relieved of making the disclosure statements because the organizations’ interests could not be “substantially affected by the outcome of the proceedings.”

The requirement that the government show “good cause” is a flexible standard that allows the court to weigh all of the relevant factors and determine on a case-by-case basis whether to relieve the government of the obligation to make disclosures under Rule 12.4. Although the style consultants expressed concern that the phrase “good cause” was vague, that phrase is used throughout the Criminal Rules where exceptions to general requirements are permitted, and it is well understood by judges and litigants. Moreover, “good cause” allows a holistic approach to the question whether to relieve the government of its disclosure responsibility, taking into account all of the relevant factors. It also allows the court to take a broad view of the scope of recusal and the information required in particular cases.

The proposed amendment to Rule 12.4(b) makes two changes. It specifies that the time for making the disclosures is within 28 days after the initial appearance, and it makes clear that a supplemental filing is required not only when information that has been disclosed changes, but also when a party learns of additional information that is subject to the disclosure requirements. The Committee concluded that adding these details while amending Rule 12.4(a) would be beneficial, although they might not, by themselves, warrant an amendment.

The Appellate Rules Committee has a parallel amendment under consideration, and its reporter participated in the development of the Committee’s proposed amendment. However, because the Appellate Rules proposal is part of a more comprehensive revision, it is on a slower timeline. Efforts to coordinate the changes will continue if the Appellate Rules Committee decides to move forward with an amendment on this subject.<sup>5</sup>

V. Cooperators

At its January 2016 meeting, the Standing Committee referred to the Criminal Rules Committee a report and recommendations from the Committee on Court Administration and Case Management (CACM). After lengthy consideration, including a study by the Federal Judicial Center, CACM made a series of findings leading to recommendations that would require significant changes in the Rules of Criminal Procedure. It unanimously concluded:

- There is “a pervasive nationwide problem regarding the use of criminal case information to identify and harm cooperators and their families.”
- The problem has been “exacerbated by widespread use of PACER and other systems that provide ready access to case information, including documents containing cooperator information and criminal dockets indicating whether cooperation did or did not occur in a case.”
- “Uniform nationwide measures regarding access to particular court documents and transcripts are necessary in order to prevent the improper use of those documents to harm or threaten government cooperators in the long term.”

CACM’s central recommendation is that all plea agreements as well as the transcript of every guilty plea proceeding and sentencing must contain a sealed portion that would include either the defendant’s cooperation or a statement that there was no cooperation. Thus every case would appear identical, and no inspection of the transcript or the documents on PACER would reveal whether any individual had cooperated. Rule 35 motions would also be sealed.

A subcommittee has been appointed to consider these recommendations. Because of the nature of the issues to be considered, the subcommittee includes representatives from CACM and the Sentencing Commission, as well as members of the Criminal Rules Committee and representatives of the Standing Committee. The members of the subcommittee are:

Judge Lewis Kaplan (chair)
Judge James Dever
Judge Terry Kemp
Ms. Carol Brook
Mr. John Siffert
Ms. Michelle Morales (Department of Justice)

---

<sup>5</sup> If that occurs, one of the issues will be the proposal that the Appellate Rule include disclosures not only for corporations, but also other “publicly held entities.”

Judge Charles Breyer (U.S. Sentencing Commission)
Judge Philip Martinez (CACM)
Judge Amy St. Eve (Ex Officio, Standing Committee representative to CACM)

The reporters prepared an introductory memorandum for the Subcommittee, which (1) provided a more detailed description of CACM's report and recommendations, (2) identified the Rules of Criminal Procedure that may be affected by CACM's recommendations, and (3) provided a brief overview of the issues raised by CACM's proposals. The Subcommittee has held one telephone conference to discuss members' initial reactions to the CACM recommendations and to determine how best to proceed.

Part of the discussion focused on how widespread the problems were and whether they warranted across-the-board changes in the Rules of Criminal Procedure. Members noted that roughly 10,000 individuals receive sentence reductions under 5K1.1 for cooperation each year, but the FJC study upon which CACM relied found only a few hundred incidents of threats or harm. Members requested more information about the prevalence of threats and harm, as well as their distribution. For example, did the incidents reported to the FCJ occur primarily in certain districts or geographic areas? Were they limited to certain offenses?

Members also expressed multiple concerns about the impact of the proposed changes on the defense. First, defense counsel presently research other sentences and agreements in order to advocate for their clients at sentencing. This would be impossible if CACM's proposals were adopted. Second, to achieve CACM's objectives, even more sealing might be required, since good advocacy weaves cooperation in throughout the motion and sentencing presentation. Indeed, it might lead to sealing of many more documents and procedures, since people learn of cooperation from other judicial documents and in open court at other procedural stages. And finally, although CACM's recommendations state that the government must continue to honor its Brady obligations, CACM's recommendations would greatly hamper the defense in making its own complementary investigations.

A related concern was whether the impact of the proposed changes in the Rules of Criminal Procedure would be sufficient to warrant the proposed changes. Members noted many other sources of information about cooperation would not be affected by the proposed changes.

Members also raised the question whether changes in the Rules of Criminal Procedure were the right remedy for the problem. Several members expressed the view that the executive branch, not the judiciary, should take the lead in solving the problems identified by CACM. The Department of Justice, not the court, has the best opportunity to identify cases in which problems are likely to arise. Others suggested that this might be an issue Congress should address.

Finally, members expressed concern that CACM's proposals were inconsistent with the foundational assumption of open judicial proceedings and raised significant First Amendment issues.

Judge Sutton suggested that the Subcommittee view its task as determining the best response to the problems, which might or might not include changes in the Rules of Criminal Procedure. He encouraged the Subcommittee to consider solutions that might include changes in local rules, the Rules of Criminal Procedure, legislation, or other options.

The call concluded with the request that the reporters gather information and do additional research in preparation for the next call.

- The Subcommittee identified the following additional information or data that would be helpful:
  - How large is the problem compared to the universe of cooperators?
  - What kinds of cases give rise to problems?
  - Is this truly a nationwide problem or are there significant geographic variations?
  - How does the experience in districts that currently seal plea agreements differ, if at all, from the experience in other districts?
- The Subcommittee also requested that the reporters prepare a memorandum on the First Amendment issues raised by CACM's proposals.
- Finally, the Subcommittee requested that the Department of Justice provide the Subcommittee with (1) information regarding its practices and experience in the 10 largest districts as well as any other relevant districts and (2) its recommendations.

At the April 2016 meeting of the Criminal Rules Committee the Subcommittee described its work to date and solicited comments from Advisory Committee members. The discussion is detailed on pages 13–17 of the minutes of the meeting.

VI. Rule 5(d) of the Rules Governing 2255 Actions

Judge Richard Wesley drew the Committee's attention to a conflict in the cases construing Rule 5(d) of the Rules Governing § 2255 Proceedings. The Rule states that "The moving party may submit a reply to the respondent's answer or other pleading within a time fixed by the judge." Although the committee note and history of the amendment make it clear that this language was intended to give the inmate a right to file a reply, some courts have held that the inmate who brings the § 2255 action has no right to file a reply, but may do so only if permitted by the court. Other courts do recognize this as a right.

After discussion at the April 2016 meeting, a subcommittee was appointed to study the proposal. Although the style consultants had advised the Committee that the text of the rule is clear, the split in the lower courts demonstrates that courts are not finding it to be clear. Inmates in some courts are not being given the opportunity to file a reply as intended by the 2004 revision. The decisions not recognizing the right to file a response may seriously affect inmates who may have a persuasive response but are not permitted to file it.

In addition to considering language that could make it clear inmates have a right to file a reply, the subcommittee will also consider whether the rule should set a presumptive time to file a reply and whether parallel changes in the Rules Governing § 2254 Proceedings would be warranted.

VII. Rule 16

A subcommittee has also been appointed to study a proposal that Criminal Rule 16 be amended to impose additional disclosure obligations on the government in complex cases. In support of a proposed amendment, The National Association of Defense Lawyers (NADL) and the New York Council of Defense Lawyers (NYCDL) stated that prosecutorial discovery is a significant problem in complex cases that involve “millions of pages of documentation,” “thousands of emails,” and “more gigabytes of information.” Their proposal provides a standard for defining a “complex case” and steps to create reciprocal discovery.

Discussion at the April meeting indicated both support for the proposal and opposition to attempting to regulate matters that some members felt were better left to the sound discretion of the trial judge.

The Department of Justice acknowledged that the proposal for targeted reciprocal discovery presented different issues than previous across-the-board efforts to expand prosecutorial discovery obligations, which the government had strongly opposed. Nevertheless, the Department indicated that it does not view amending the rules as the best way to tackle the problems identified by NADL and the NYCDL. For example, the Department worked with the defense bar to develop guidance for judges on electronic discovery, resulting in the production of a very useful a pocket guide. That kind of collaboration is nimble and can change quickly as the technology changes. Technology is a moving target. The Department favors a focus on developing best practices and guidance, not specific prescriptive rules. Best practices and guidance, developed in collaboration with the defense bar, will be able to change quickly as the technology changes.

VIII. Suggestions That Will Not Be Pursued

The Committee also decided not to pursue several suggested amendments.

- The Justice Department has withdrawn its proposal to amend Rule 15's provisions governing the costs of depositions requested by the defense.
- Two suggestions that the rules be amended to give pro se defendants the right to file electronically will not be pursued separately because that issue has been addressed in the Committee's proposal to amend Rule 49.
- The Committee also decided not to pursue a proposal to require redaction of the last four digits of social security numbers, since the issue was common to all of the rules and should be resolved in a uniform fashion by CACM.
- Following the lead of the other committees to whom this suggestion was also submitted, the Committee decided not to pursue a proposal to require litigants citing unpublished cases to serve those cases on pro se parties.
- The Committee decided not to pursue a suggestion that Rule 12 be amended to make it clear that the standard for dismissal of a criminal indictment for failure to state an offense is the same as the standard for dismissal of a civil complaint under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6).

Committee Note

Subdivision (a). Rule 12.4 requires the government to identify organizational victims to assist judges in complying with their obligations under the Judicial Code of Conduct. The 2009 amendments to Canon 3(C)(1)(c) of the Judicial Code require recusal only when a judge has “an interest that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceeding.” In some cases, there are numerous organizational victims, but the impact of the crime on each is relatively small. In such cases, the amendment allows the government to show good cause to be relieved of making the disclosure statements because the organizations’ interests could not be “substantially affected by the outcome of the proceedings.”

Subdivision (b). The amendment specifies that the time for making the disclosures is within 28 days after the initial appearance, and it makes clear that a supplemental filing is required not only when information that has been disclosed changes, but also when a party learns of additional information that is subject to the disclosure requirements.

Committee Note

Rule 49 previously required service and filing “in a manner provided” in the Civil Rules, and the time counting provisions in Criminal Rule 45(c) referred to certain forms of service under Civil Rule 5. A contemporaneous amendment moves the instructions for filing and service in criminal cases from Civil Rule 5 into Criminal Rule 49.

---

<sup>2</sup> This rule text reflects amendments adopted by the Supreme Court and transmitted to Congress on April 28, 2016, which have an anticipated effective date of December 1, 2016.

This amendment revises the cross references in Rule 45(c) to reflect this change.

1 Rule 49. Serving and Filing Papers

2 (a) Service on a Party.

3 (1) What is~~When Required.~~ A party must serve on 4 ~~every other party~~Each of the following must be
5 served on every party: any written motion (other
6 than one to be heard ex parte), written notice,
7 designation of the record on appeal, or similar 8 paper.

9 ~~(b) How Made.~~ Service must be made in the manner
10 provided for a civil action.

11 (2) Serving a Party's Attorney. Unless the court
12 orders otherwise, ~~W~~when these rules or a court
13 order requires or permits service on a party
14 represented by an attorney, service must be made 15 on the attorney instead of the party, ~~unless the~~ 16 ~~court orders otherwise.~~

17 (3) Service by Electronic Means.

18 (A) Using the Court's Electronic Filing System.

19 A party represented by an attorney may 20 serve a paper on a registered user by filing
21 it with the court's electronic-filing system.

22 A party not represented by an attorney may 23 do so only if allowed by court order or local 24 rule. Service is complete upon filing, but is 25 not effective if the serving party learns that 26 it did not reach the person to be served.

27 (B) Using Other Electronic Means. A paper

28 may be served by any other electronic 29 means that the person consented to in 30 writing. Service is complete upon 31 transmission, but is not effective if the 32 serving party learns that it did not reach the 33 person to be served.

- 34 (4) Service by Nonelectronic Means. A paper may 35 be served by:
36 (A) handing it to the person;
37 (B) leaving it:
38 (i) at the person's office with a clerk or 39 other person in charge or, if no one is 40 in charge, in a conspicuous place in 41 the office; or
42 (ii) if the person has no office or the office
43 is closed, at the person's dwelling or 44 usual place of abode with someone of 45 suitable age and discretion who 46 resides there;
47 (C) mailing it to the person's last known 48 address—in which event service is 49 complete upon mailing;
50 (D) leaving it with the court clerk if the person
51 has no known address; or

52 (E) delivering it by any other means that the 53 person consented to in writing—in which 54 event service is complete when the person
 55 making service delivers it to the agency
 56 designated to make delivery.

57 (b) Filing.

58 (1) When Required; Certificate of Service. Any 59 paper that is required to be served—together
 60 with a certificate of service—must be filed
 61 within a reasonable time after service. A notice
 62 of electronic filing constitutes a certificate of 63 service on any person served by the court’s
 64 electronic-filing system.

65 (2) Means of Filing.

66 (A) Electronically. A paper is filed
 67 electronically by filing it with the court’s
 68 electronic-filing system. The user name
 69 and password of an attorney of record,

70 together with the attorney's name on a
71 signature block, serves as the attorney's 72 signature. A paper filed electronically is 73 written or in writing under these rules.

74 (B) Nonelectronically. A paper not filed
75 electronically is filed by delivering it:

76 (i) to the clerk; or

77 (ii) to a judge who agrees to accept it for 78 filing, and who must then note the 79 filing date on the paper and promptly
80 send it to the clerk.

81 (3) Means Used by Represented and Unrepresented
82 Parties.

83 (A) Represented Party. A party represented by 84 an attorney must file electronically, unless 85 nonelectronic filing is allowed by the court
86 for good cause or is allowed or required by 87 local rule.

88           (B) Unrepresented Party.    A party not 89           represented by an attorney must file
90           nonelectronically, unless allowed to file
91           electronically by court order or local rule.

92           (4) Signature.   Every written motion and other 93           paper must be signed by at least one attorney of 94           record in the attorney's name—or by a person
95           filing a paper if the person is not represented by 96           an attorney. The paper must state the signer's
97           address, e-mail address, and telephone number.
98           Unless a rule or statute specifically states
99           otherwise, a pleading need not be verified or 100           accompanied by an affidavit. The court must 101           strike an unsigned paper unless the omission is 102           promptly corrected after being called to the 103           attorney's or person's attention.

104           (5) Acceptance by the Clerk.   The clerk must not 105           refuse to file a paper solely because it is not in

106 the form prescribed by these rules or by a local 107 rule or practice.

108 (c) Service and Filing by Nonparties. A nonparty may 109 serve and file a paper only if doing so is required or 110 permitted by law. A nonparty must serve every party
111 as required by Rule 49(a), but may use the court's 112 electronic-filing system only if allowed by court order
113 or local rule.

114 (d) Notice of a Court Order. When the court issues an 115 order on any post-arraignment motion, the clerk must 116 ~~provide notice in a manner provided for in a civil~~ 117 ~~action~~ serve notice of the entry on each party as 118 required by Rule 49(a). A party also may serve notice
119 of the entry, by the same means. Except as Federal 120 Rule of Appellate Procedure 4(b) provides otherwise, 121 the clerk's failure to give notice does not affect the 122 time to appeal, or relieve—or authorize the court to

123           relieve—a party’s failure to appeal within the allowed 124           time.

125   ~~(d) Filing. A party must file with the court a copy of any~~ 126           ~~paper the party is required to serve. A paper must be~~
127           ~~filed in a manner provided for in a civil action.~~

128   ~~(e) Electronic Service and Filing. A court may, by local~~ 129           ~~rule, allow papers to be filed, signed, or verified by~~ 130           ~~electronic means that are consistent with any technical~~ 131           ~~standards established by the Judicial Conference of~~ 132           ~~the United States. A local rule may require electronic~~ 133           ~~filing only if reasonable exceptions are allowed. A~~ 134           ~~paper filed electronically in compliance with a local~~
135           ~~rule is written or in writing under these rules.~~

Committee Note

Rule 49 previously required service and filing in a “manner provided” in “a civil action.” The amendments to Rule 49 move the instructions for filing and service from the Civil Rules into Rule 49. Placing instructions for filing and service in the criminal rule avoids the need to refer to two sets of rules, and permits independent development of those rules. Except where specifically noted, the amendments are intended to carry over the existing law on filing and service and to preserve parallelism with the Civil Rules.

Additionally, the amendments eliminate the provision permitting electronic filing only when authorized by local rules, moving—with the Rules governing Appellate, Civil, and Bankruptcy proceedings—to a national rule that mandates electronic filing for parties represented by an attorney with certain exceptions. Electronic filing has matured. Most districts have adopted local rules that require electronic filing by represented parties, and allow reasonable exceptions as required by the former rule. The time has come to seize the advantages of electronic filing by making it mandatory in all districts for a party represented by an attorney, except that nonelectronic filing may be allowed by the court for good cause, or allowed or required by local rule.

Rule 49(a)(1). The language from former Rule 49(a) is retained in new Rule 49(a)(1), except for one change. The new phrase, “Each of the following must be served on every party” restores to this part of the rule the passive construction that it had prior to restyling in 2002. That restyling revised the language to apply to parties only, inadvertently ending its application to nonparties who, on occasion, file motions in criminal cases. Additional guidance for nonparties appears in new subdivision (c).

Rule 49(a)(2). The language from former Rule 49(b) concerning service on the attorney of a represented party is retained here, with the “unless” clause moved to the beginning for reasons of style only.

Rule 49(a)(3) and (4). Subsections (a)(3) and (4) list the permissible means of service. These new provisions duplicate the description of permissible means from Civil Rule 5, carrying them into the criminal rule.

By listing service by filing with the court's electronic-filing system first, in (3)(A), the rule now recognizes the advantages of electronic filing and service and its widespread use in criminal cases by represented defendants and government attorneys.

But the e-filing system is designed for attorneys, and its use can pose many challenges for pro se parties. In the criminal context, the rules must ensure ready access to the courts by all pro se defendants and incarcerated individuals, filers who often lack reliable access to the internet or email. Although access to electronic filing systems may expand with time, presently many districts do not allow e-filing by unrepresented defendants or prisoners. Accordingly, subsection (3)(A) provides that represented parties may serve registered users by filing with the court's electronic filing system, but unrepresented parties may do so only if allowed by court order or local rule.

Subparagraph (3)(B) permits service by "other electronic means," such as email, that the person served consented to in writing.

Both subparagraphs (3)(A) and (B) include the direction from Civil Rule 5 that service is complete upon e-filing or transmission, but is not effective if the serving party learns that the person to be served did not receive the notice of e-filing or the paper transmitted by other electronic means. The language mirrors Civil Rule 5(b)(2)(E). But unlike Civil Rule 5, Criminal Rule 49 contains a separate provision for service by use of the court's electronic filing system.

Subsection (a)(4) lists a number of traditional, nonelectronic means of serving papers, identical to those provided in Civil Rule 5.

Rule 49(b)(1). Filing rules in former Rule 49 appeared in subdivision (d), which provided that a party must file a copy of any paper the party is required to serve, and required filing in a manner provided in a civil action. These requirements now appear in subdivision (b).

The language requiring filing of papers that must be served is retained from former subdivision (d), but has been moved to subsection (1) of subdivision (b), and revised to restore the passive phrasing prior to the restyling in 2002. That restyling departed from the phrasing in Civil Rule 5(d)(1) and inadvertently limited this requirement to filing by parties.

The language in former subdivision (d) that required filing “in a manner provided for in a civil action” has been replaced in new subsection (b)(1) by language drawn from Civil Rule 5(d)(1). That provision used to state “Any paper . . . that is required to be served—together with a certificate of service—must be filed within a reasonable time after service.” A contemporaneous amendment to Civil Rule 5(d)(1) has subdivided this provision into two parts, one of which addresses the Certificate of Service. Although the Criminal Rules version is not subdivided in the same way, it is intended to have the same meaning as the Civil Rules provision from which it was drawn.

The last sentence of subsection (b)(1), which states that a notice of electronic filing constitutes a certificate of service on a party served by using the court’s electronic-filing system, mirrors the contemporaneous amendment to Civil Rule 5. When service is not made by filing with the court’s electronic filing system, a certificate of service must be filed.

Rule 49(b)(2). New subsection (b)(2) lists the three ways papers can be filed. (A) provides for electronic filing using the court's electronic filing system and includes a provision, drawn from the Civil Rule, stating that the user name and password of an attorney of record serves as the attorney's signature. The last sentence of subsection (b)(2)(A) contains the language of former Rule 49(d), providing that e-filed papers are "written or in writing," deleting the words "in compliance with a local rule" as no longer necessary.

Subsection (b)(2)(B) carries over from the Civil Rule two nonelectronic methods of filing a paper: delivery to the court clerk and delivery to a judge who agrees to accept it for filing.

Rule 49(b)(3). New subsection (b)(3) provides instructions for parties regarding the means of filing to be used, depending upon whether the party is represented by an attorney. Subsection (b)(3)(A) requires represented parties to use the court's electronic filing system, but provides that nonelectronic filing may be allowed for good cause, and may be required or allowed for other reasons by local rule. This language is identical to that adopted in the contemporaneous amendment to Civil Rule 5.

Subsection (b)(3)(B) requires unrepresented parties to file nonelectronically, unless allowed to file electronically by court order or local rule. This language differs from that of the amended Civil Rule, which provides that an unrepresented party may be "required" to file electronically by a court order or local rule that allows reasonable exceptions. A different approach to electronic filing by unrepresented parties is needed in criminal cases, where electronic filing by pro se prisoners presents significant challenges. Pro se parties filing papers under the criminal rules generally lack the means to e-file or receive electronic confirmations, yet must be provided access to the courts under the Constitution.

Rule 49(b)(4). This new language requiring a signature and additional information was drawn from Civil Rule 11(a). The language has been restyled (with no intent to change the meaning) and the word “party” changed to “person” in order to accommodate filings by nonparties.

Rule 49(b)(5). This new language prohibiting a clerk from refusing a filing for improper form was drawn from Civil Rule 5(d)(4).

Rule 49(c). This provision is new. It recognizes that in limited circumstances nonparties may file motions in criminal cases. Examples include representatives of the media challenging the closure of proceedings, material witnesses requesting to be deposed under Rule 15, or victims asserting rights under Rule 60. Subdivision (c) permits nonparties to file a paper in a criminal case, but only when required or permitted by law to do so. It also requires nonparties who file to serve every party and to use means authorized by subdivision (a).

The rule provides that nonparties, like unrepresented parties, may use the court’s electronic filing system only when permitted to do so by court order or local rule.

Rule 49(d). This provision carries over the language formerly in Rule 49(c) with one change. The former language requiring that notice be provided “in a manner provided for in a civil action” has been replaced by a requirement that notice be served as required by Rule 49(a). This parallels Civil Rule 77(d)(1), which requires that the clerk give notice as provided in in Civil Rule 5(d)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON CRIMINAL RULES DRAFT MINUTES
April 18, 2016, Washington, D.C.

I. Attendance and Preliminary Matters

The Criminal Rules Advisory Committee (“Committee”) met in Washington, D.C., on April 18, 2016. The following persons were in attendance:

Judge Donald W. Molloy, Chair
Carol A. Brook, Esq.
Judge James C. Dever
Judge Gary S. Feinerman
Mark Filip, Esq.
Chief Justice David E. Gilbertson
Judge Denise Page Hood
Judge Lewis A. Kaplan
Judge Terence Peter Kemp
Professor Orin S. Kerr
Judge Raymond M. Kethledge
Michelle Morales, Esq.<sup>1</sup>
John S. Siffert, Esq.
James N. Hatten, Clerk of Court Liaison
Professor Sara Sun Beale, Reporter
Professor Nancy J. King, Reporter
Professor Daniel R. Coquillette, Standing Committee Reporter
Judge Amy J. St. Eve, Standing Committee Liaison

And the following persons were present to support the Committee:

Rebecca A. Womeldorf, Rules Committee Officer and Secretary to the Committee on Practice and Procedure
Bridget M. Healy, Rules Office Attorney
Julie Wilson, Rules Office Attorney
Shelly Cox, Rules Committee Support Office
Laural L. Hooper, Federal Judicial Center
Margaret Williams, Federal Judicial Center

II. CHAIR'S REMARKS AND OPENING BUSINESS

A. Chair's Remarks

Judge Molloy opened the meeting and thanked the reporters for their work in preparing the agenda book. He then asked members to introduce themselves, and he welcomed observers, including Peter Goldberger of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers and Catherine M. Recker of the American College of Trial Lawyers. Judge Molloy also thanked all of the staff members who made the arrangements for the meeting and the hearings.

B. Minutes of September 2015 Meeting

A motion to approve the minutes having been moved and seconded, the Committee unanimously approved the September 2015 meeting minutes by voice vote.

C. Status of Criminal Rules: Report of the Rules Committee Support Office

The Committee's proposed amendments to Rules 4, 41, and 45 were submitted to the Supreme Court, which has until May 1 to transmit them to Congress. Ms. Womeldorf expressed the hope that the amendments would soon be sent to Congress.<sup>2</sup> Judge Molloy expressed his appreciation for the members' hard work on these amendments.

III. CRIMINAL RULES ACTIONS

A. Proposed Amendment to Rule 49

Judge Feinerman, chair of the Rule 49 Subcommittee, acknowledged the reporters' assistance and thanked the subcommittee members for their time, thought, and effort. He then presented the subcommittee's recommended amendment and committee note.

Judge Feinerman began by providing an overview of the subcommittee's work, which grew out of a Standing Committee initiative to adapt the rules of procedure to the modernization of the courts' electronic filing system. The subcommittee's work was guided by two imperatives, which were sometimes in tension: (1) the Advisory Committee's direction to draft a stand-alone rule on filing and service adapted to criminal litigation, and (2) the Standing Committee's direction to depart from the language of Civil Rule 5 only when justified by significant difference between civil and criminal practice. To achieve these objectives, the subcommittee worked closely with representatives of the Civil Rules Committee, who participated in the subcommittee's teleconferences and were in frequent communication with the reporters. Finally, the subcommittee received the advice of the style consultants.

Judge Feinerman then provided a section-by-section analysis of the proposed amendment to Rule 49, inviting questions and comments from members as he presented each section.

49(a)(1). Judge Feinerman noted that subsection (a) (1) preserves much of the language from the current rule. The language regarding what must be served is retained from existing Rule 49(a): “any written motion (other than one to be heard ex parte), written notice, designation of the record on appeal, or similar paper.” Parties and courts know what the existing language means, no difficulties have arisen from the current language of the rule, and tinkering with it without a compelling reason could do more harm than good.

The subcommittee proposes, however, a change in the language governing who must serve, in order to reverse an unintended change that occurred when the rule was restyled from the passive to the active voice in 2002. That change inadvertently carved out nonparties. The subcommittee recommends a return to the passive construction used prior to 2002, so nonparties (as well as parties) will be required to serve the items described in (a).

Professor King noted that there had been a suggestion that the committee note might include a statement that the amendment did not modify or expand the scope of the rule or change the practice regarding concerning papers, such as discovery, that are disclosed but not necessarily filed or served. Concern had also been expressed about making clear that probation and pretrial services reports were not covered by the amended rule.

Professor Beale added that committee notes cannot change the meaning of the rule, and there is always a question how much explanation should be provided. The proposed committee note does not include language stating that the scope of the papers that must be served has not changed, or language stating that it does not apply to probation and pretrial services reports. Beale also noted that the change to the passive voice in subsection (a) was an example of a point on which the style consultants had yielded to the subcommittee because the passive voice was necessary for substantive reasons. Indeed, the discovery of—and opportunity to correct—the unintended change wrought by restyling was an unanticipated benefit of the current project.

Finally, Judge Feinerman noted that the rule explicitly covers only service “on a party.” Although nothing in the existing (or pre-2002) Rule 49 addresses service on nonparties, this does not seem to have caused any problems. The parties generally use common sense in determining when to serve nonparties, and the subcommittee thought it best not to try, at this time, to craft a rule that would apply in all of the situations when a nonparty may file in a criminal case, perhaps causing unintended consequences.

Rule 49(a)(2). Judge Feinerman noted Rule 49(a)(2) was unchanged except for a minor matter of style.

Rule 49(a)(3). Judge Feinerman then moved on the Rule 49(a)(3), noting it was a completely new provision that distinguishes between electronic service and service by other means. The subcommittee felt it was very important to put electronic service, which is the dominant mode of service, first. Professor King noted that the both the Civil and Criminal amendments now use the language referring to the “court’s electronic filing system.”

Professor King then drew attention to a difference between the Civil and Criminal proposals, which use different phrasing to describe a situation in which electronic service is ineffective. The Civil proposal says electronic service is ineffective if the server learns that “it did not reach the person to be served.” In contrast, the subcommittee’s proposal provides service is ineffective if the server learns that the person to be served did not receive “the notice of electronic filing” (NEF). The subcommittee thought this language was more accurate.<sup>3</sup>

Members were reminded that the current rule (as well as the proposed civil rule) now treats electronic service differently than other forms of service (such as mail or delivery to a person’s office or dwelling). Because of concerns about the reliability of electronic service, Civil Rule 5 (which governs in criminal cases as well) provides that service is not effective if the serving party knows that the electronic service did not reach the party to be served. In contrast, all other forms of service are effective if the serving party takes the specified action (such as mailing), even if for some reason the party to be served does not receive service. The civil and criminal proposals retain this favorable treatment for electronic service, which focuses on the serving party’s knowledge that electronic service was not effective.

Discussion turned to the appropriate scope of the exception. Mr. Hatten explained that the clerk’s office does not receive bounce back messages, such as “out of office” notices. The clerks do, however, receive a notice if the CM/ECF system was unable to deliver the email, which occurs, for example, when the recipient’s mailbox is full. In those cases, the clerk’s office will follow up with the recipient of service. As a member noted, it would be a very rare instance in which the serving party learns that CM/ECF service was not effective. A lawyer member wondered if the proposed rule imposed too great a burden on defense lawyers, including those in small firms, who may have no one to monitor their emails. Mr. Hatten responded that in order to use the CM/ECF system lawyers had to agree to receive electronic service, and thus had to have in place a system to monitor their emails.

But a party may learn of and have access to papers that have been served even if the party never received the NEF. For example, a lawyer who did not receive a NEF (because, for example, of a changed email address that was not updated) might nonetheless learn of the document or order and access it from the docket. This would not constitute service under the subcommittee’s proposal, which focuses exclusively on the server’s knowledge of whether the party to be served received the NEF. (On this point, the phrasing of the Civil Rule, which uses “it,” might allow the serving party to argue that the party to be served had received “it.”)

The Committee concluded that if the party to be served has indeed received the document by some other means—whether by mail, email, or simply reading the docket—service should be deemed effective. A member moved to amend proposed Rule 49(a)(3)(A) to provide “service . . . is not effective if the serving party learns that neither the notice of electronic filing nor the paper reached the person to be served.” The motion passed.<sup>4</sup> One member noted, however, that it might be difficult to determine the effective date of service if it became effective by some means other than receipt of the NEF, such as the party to be served reviewing the docket.

Professor Beale reminded the Committee of the importance of the use of uniform language in the Civil and Criminal Rules on filing and service, and she stated that the reporters would convey the Committee’s view on this issue to the representatives of the Civil Rules Committee.

Rule 49(a)(4). Judge Feinerman noted that these provisions were drawn, verbatim, from Civil Rule 5. In general, the subcommittee recognized that it would not be helpful to tinker with the language because the Civil Rules Committee was satisfied with the language. For that reason, the subcommittee did not propose a change in the bracketed language on lines 35-36 unless the Civil Rules Committee would support a parallel amendment to Rule 5.

Rule 49(b)(1). Judge Feinerman noted that the major change from the current rule on filing was to restore the passive construction. He asked the reporters to draw the Committee’s attention to key issues. Professor Beale noted that the subcommittee considered, but did not recommend, adding the qualifier “under this rule” between “served” and “together.” She noted there are other rules that provide for service by specific means, such as the Committee’s pending amendment to Rule 4 governing service on foreign corporations. The Subcommittee concluded that the phrase “under this rule” was not necessary. Where other rules identify specific means of service for certain documents or orders, it seems clear that the more general provisions of Rule 49 are not intended to override them. Moreover, adding the phrase “under this Rule” could engender confusion. The phrase is not included in the current rule, and its addition might suggest, misleadingly, that Rule 49 does not apply to a variety of items that other rules require to be served. Professor King noted that the rules specifying particular forms of service were Rule 4 (summons on corporations), Rule 41 (warrants), Rule 46 (sureties), and Rule 58 (appearances). Professor Beale explained that these rules will continue to coexist with Rule 49, which under (a)(1) governs service and filing of “any written motion . . . , written notice, designation of the record on appeal, or similar paper.”

One other point that the subcommittee considered was whether to delete the requirement

<sup>4</sup> After the meeting, the reporters and chair consulted with representatives of the other committees working on parallel drafts concerning electronic filing and service. There was a consensus that time did not permit consideration of this proposal by other committees before submission to the Standing Committee. In light of the importance of consistency in the rules of electronic filing and service, the representatives of the Criminal Rules Committee agreed to delete the new language from the draft of Rule 49 submitted to the Standing Committee. As the representatives of the other committees noted, the proposal would be a change in current law. Before such a change is recommended, the committees should have an opportunity to consider the policy implications, and whether this approach, if adopted, should be applied to other forms of service. The committees can, however, take the proposal up again at a later date. As part of the later effort to reconcile differences between the various sets of rules, Judges Molloy and Feinerman and the Reporters also reviewed and approved a modification to Rule 49 to retain the language of the Civil Rule, that is, stating that service is ineffective if the serving party learns that “it” was not received.

that filing of any paper required to be served must occur “within a reasonable time after service.” The subcommittee considered deleting this restriction. Members were not aware of any problem with untimely filing in criminal cases, but decided to retain this provision to parallel Civil Rule 5.

One question that had been left open, reflected in brackets on line 40, was whether the rule should refer at this point to “any person” or “any party.” Professor King noted that the Civil Rules Committee had now approved a draft amendment using “any person,” which would be adopted as well in the Criminal amendment.

Rule 49(b)(2). Judge Feinerman noted that here, as in (a), the subcommittee proposed places electronic filing first in (b) for the same reasons it placed electronic service first in Rule 49(a). Also, the Subcommittee reasoned, the subsection including the definition what it means to “file electronically” should precede the use of that term. (In contrast, the civil proposal retains the current order of Rule 5’s subdivisions, which places nonelectronic filing first.) Professor King stated that there was still a minor styling issue to be resolved (“by using” or some alternative such as “by use of”), which would be resolved in favor of uniformity after consultation with the style consultants and the other reporters and chairs. Professor Beale noted that the Civil Rules Committee just completed its meeting three days earlier. She reminded the Committee that because of the emphasis on uniform language among the parallel proposed amendments, it would be essential for Judges Molloy and Feinerman (with the reporters) to have leeway to agree to necessary stylistic changes as the proposals advance to the Standing Committee. Judge Feinerman agreed, though he observed that if he and Judge Molloy were asked to make significant changes in the proposal approved by the Committee, they would consider seeking approval from the Committee.

Professor Beale also drew attention to the proposed provision regarding a filer’s user name and password serving as an attorney’s signature, which was closely related to the signature provision in (b)(4). In September, the Committee did not approve provisions on a signature block, which were phrased differently than the current proposal. The new proposal imports the language of Civil Rule 11(a). The subcommittee found it unnecessary to determine whether Civil Rule 11’s signature provisions are presently included in Rule 49(d)’s directive to file “in a manner provided for in a civil action.” If this requirement is not currently imported by Rule 49(d), the subcommittee thought it would be a desirable requirement as a matter of policy. Accordingly, the subcommittee decided to adopt the language of Rule 11 verbatim. A lawyer member questioned whether it was appropriate to incorporate the language of Civil Rule 11, which requires the attorney’s signature in order to impose restrictions on counsel to certify the accuracy of the pleadings. He stressed that the role of defense counsel in civil and criminal cases is quite different: in criminal cases, the defense does not make representations but rather puts the government to its proof. He expressed concern that the signature requirement signaled an unfortunate drift towards the civil understanding of the lawyer’s role. Professor King responded that the portions of Rule 11 that are relevant to this member’s concern about good faith representations to the court are in Rule 11(b). The subcommittee’s proposal, however, imports only the language of Rule 11(a). By importing only this language, the proposal does not bring in any requirements concerning counsel’s representations.

Judge Feinerman also drew attention to one other aspect of proposed subdivision (b)(2)(A): the phrase “written or in writing.” This language is now in Rule 49(e). The subcommittee favored retaining this language, rather than paring it down, because it captures the variety of phrases now used in the Rules of Criminal Procedure.

Rule 49(b)(3)(A) and (B). Noting that this provision creates a presumption that represented parties must file electronically, but that non-represented parties must file by non-electronic means, Judge Feinerman invited the reporters to comment. Professor King reminded the Committee that the new presumption for electronic filing by represented parties was a central goal of the amendment process. It was the proper presumption for unrepresented parties that had originally divided the Civil and Criminal Rules Committees. This Committee took a strong stance that unrepresented parties in criminal cases should not file electronically unless specifically allowed by local rule or court order. The subcommittee’s proposal implements that policy choice.

But even with a stand-alone amendment to Rule 49, the Civil Rules are still of concern to the Criminal Rule Committee because of their effect in habeas cases. Professor King noted that Rule 12 of the 2254 Rules, which govern state habeas cases, incorporates the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure unless they are inconsistent with the habeas rules. And the Rules Governing 2254 and 2255 actions are the responsibility of the Criminal Rules Committee.

The proposal just adopted by the Civil Rules Committee provides that unrepresented parties in civil cases may be permitted or required to file electronically by local rules or orders which permit reasonable exceptions. The Civil Rules Committee wanted to provide explicit authorization for existing programs in some districts that now require inmates to file 2254 pleadings electronically. The clerk of court liaison to the Civil Rules Committee is from a district that now has such a local rule, which was designed in cooperation with officials at a local prison. In that institution, prisoners are required to take their 2254 pleadings to the prison library, where the staff members PDF them and then email them to the court. The same system operates in a neighboring district. Officials in these courts and participating prisons are very pleased with the program. The proposed Civil amendment would allow the continuation of such programs. Although the Criminal Rules Committee has no formal role in the approval of the changes to Rule 5, the reporters requested discussion of the Civil Rule so that they could share the Committee’s views with their Civil counterparts.

Professor Beale noted that the policy implications of the current Civil proposal are somewhat different from the issues previously discussed by the Committee. At its prior meetings, the Committee took a strong stand against a national rule that would override the current local rules in many districts that do not permit electronic filing by unrepresented criminal defendants. But the current proposal does not override any local rules. Instead, it permits districts to adopt local rules that require—with reasonable exceptions—that unrepresented inmates file electronically. She noted that some districts have large caseloads of inmate filings, and the Civil Rules Committee wants to allow them the option of requiring unrepresented inmates to file electronically.

The proposed Civil Rule states that a local rule requiring unrepresented civil parties to file electronically must allow reasonable exceptions. This provision requiring reasonable exceptions was added at the subcommittee's request, and it provides some protection against a local rule or order that would otherwise impose an unreasonable burden on state habeas filers.

Mr. Hatten put the proposed Civil Rule into its historical context. The current CM/ECF system began as a program in a single district with a heavy caseload of asbestos cases. It was implemented nationally in waves, allowing changes to be made based on experience. The system was designed solely for courts and attorney filers, not for lay filers. The current resources are designed for those filers, and the clerks do not screen filings. From the clerk's perspective (staffing, resources, and work measurement), he said, lay filers present very different issues. He expressed concern that the proposed Civil Rule seemed poised to expand lay filing nationwide without any redesign of the system or sufficient testing in individual courts.

Professor Beale responded that the Civil Rules proposal allowing local rules requiring unrepresented parties to file could be seen as the kind of step-by-step process that had worked well for electronic filing by attorneys and the courts. At present, these are programs developed by individual districts in conjunction with local correctional officials. They seem to be working well. On the other hand, the reporters are not sure how these local rules mesh with the current Rules Governing 2254 and 2255 Proceedings, which refer to internal prison filing systems for legal mail and inmates depositing papers to be filed showing prepaid postage.

Professor King drew attention to several aspects of the current local rules regarding electronic filing by inmates that were of special concern to the Civil Rules Committee. The inmates do not receive individual access to the CM/ECF system. Rather, officials in the prison library receive the inmates' papers, convert them to PDFs, and then submit them to the court electronically. This has many advantages: it is cheaper and faster than using the mail, and it produces a record of when the paper was sent and received. We do not know exactly how other aspects of these programs work. For example, do inmates in these programs receive NEFs?

There was general agreement that these programs would not work everywhere, and electronic filing by inmates would not be possible in many districts. Justice Gilbertson stated that in South Dakota no state prisoners have access to electronic filing, and most prisoner filings are hand written. Requiring inmates to file electronically in his state would shut down inmate filing. At Judge Molloy's request, Justice Gilbertson agreed to make enquiries about other states through the National Center for State Courts.

A member asked who determines whether a local rule permits "reasonable exceptions," or what constitutes such a "reasonable exception." The reporters stated they had not researched this question, but they pointed out that this phrase is present in current Rule 49(e), as well as its Civil counterpart, Rule 5(d)(3). No one had noted any special problems in connection with the phrase. It seems likely that the proposed Civil rule would be given the same interpretation as the current rules.

Concluding the discussion, Judge Feinerman reiterated the importance of the Civil Rules Committee's inclusion of the requirement that any local rule requiring unrepresented parties to file electronically must provide for reasonable exceptions. He expressed the hope that this language would accommodate due process concerns and prevent the imposition of unreasonable burdens on inmate filers. He also observed that courts are unlikely to adopt local rules requiring electronic filing by unrepresented inmates without first consulting with prison authorities to determine what is feasible.

Rule 49(b)(4). Judge Feinerman then turned to one feature of subsection (b)(4) that had not previously been discussed: the provision stating that verification of pleadings is not required unless a statute or rule specifically states otherwise. This provision was drawn from the Civil Rules. Judge Feinerman noted it might provide a useful reminder for 2255 filers, because the Rules Governing 2255 actions require verification. Professor Beale agreed that it might provide a useful clarification for filers in 2255 cases. Additionally, because this language is included in the Civil Rules, its exclusion from Rule 49 might lead to a negative implication. Since the language might have some value and could do no harm, she concluded that it seemed best to parallel the Civil Rules.

Rule 49(c). Judge Feinerman explained that this provision makes explicit that nonparties may file and serve in criminal cases. Unlike the other provisions already discussed, he pointed out, (c) does not distinguish between represented and unrepresented nonparties. All nonparties are presumptively required to file by nonelectronic means. He identified several reasons for requiring nonparties to file outside the CM/ECF system. First, the architecture of the CM/ECF system is designed to permit only the government or a defendant to file electronically. Even a registered attorney user cannot file in a criminal case unless the attorney indicates that he represents either the government or a defendant. Second, members had informed the Subcommittee that many nonparty filers prefer not to use the CM/ECF system. Finally, victims may file material that should not go into the system and be available to all parties. The rule does allow the court to permit a particular nonparty to file electronically (with the assistance of the clerk), and it gives districts the option of adopting local court rules that allow nonparties to file electronically.

Judge Feinerman noted that the proposed rule does not refer to filings by probation or pretrial services, which are neither parties nor nonparties (“neither fish nor fowl”). Because probation and pretrial services do file their reports electronically in some districts, he raised the question whether the committee note should be amended to make it clear they were not covered by Rule 49. Although there has been no question of the applicability of the current rule to probation and pretrial services, the addition of (c) now makes the application of the rule to nonparties clear. Members discussed the practice in their own districts. In some, probation and pretrial services did not use the CM/ECF system, but in others all of their reports were filed using CM/ECF (though presentence reports and some other documents were sealed). Professor Beale observed that everyone agreed that when the court issues an opinion, it is not governed by Rule 49. Since pretrial services and probation are arms of the court, the Subcommittee thought they were distinguishable from the parties and nonparties governed by the rule.

A motion was made to add language to the note stating that the rule was not applicable to the court or its probation and pretrial services divisions, but it was withdrawn after discussion. Professor Coquillette reminded the Committee of the limited function of committee notes. A member noted that the Federal Defenders are also, as a matter of organization, a part of the court, but they are of course subject to Rule 49. Another member stated that he did not see a problem that required any change. Everyone understands that probation and pretrial services are part of the court and not covered by the Rule. The member who had made the motion withdrew it.

Rule 49(d). Judge Feinerman then turned to the last subsection of the proposed rule, which requires the clerk to serve notice of the entry of the court's order, and allows a party to serve the notice. He stated that the language in the Subcommittee draft was drawn from Civil Rule 77(d)(1), and its inclusion was consistent with the general presumption in favor of incorporating the relevant provisions of the Civil Rules. Professor Beale noted the interaction between the notice provisions and FRAP 4. FRAP 4(a) governs civil appeals, and 4(b) governs criminal appeals. Although the impact of the provision allowing a party to give notice would be somewhat different in civil and criminal cases, she observed that it seemed to have sufficient utility in criminal cases to justify its inclusion. Under FRAP 4(b), the notice given by a party might be relevant to a defendant's efforts to establish excusable neglect or good cause for a late filing. The Subcommittee had no strong feelings about this provision. Beale stated that in her view, since this provision was in the Civil Rule, might have some benefit in criminal cases, and would do no harm, it was appropriate to include it.

There was a motion to approve the Subcommittee draft, as amended, for transmission to the Standing Committee with the recommendation that it be published for public comment, with the provision that Judge Molloy, Judge Feinerman, and the reporters would need to work with the other committees, and it might be necessary to make minor changes for consistency with the other proposed amendments.

The Committee voted unanimously to approve the proposed amendments to Rule 49, as amended, to transmit them to the Standing Committee, and to recognize the authority of the Committee chair, Subcommittee chair, and reporters to make minor changes to conform to the language of parallel proposals from other committees.

Discussion of the committee note was deferred until after the lunch break, to allow the reporters to determine what revisions would be required in light of the amendment to proposed Rule 49(a)(3)(A).

Judge Feinerman turned next to the Subcommittee's proposal to amend Rule 45. He explained that Rule 45(c) currently refers to several subsections of Civil Rule 5 describing different means of filing. As part of creating a stand-alone rule on filing and service, the Subcommittee's proposal incorporated these forms of service into Rule 49. Accordingly, the Subcommittee proposed an amendment replacing the cross references to Rule 5 with the appropriate cross references in Rule 49. Ms. Womeldorf and Professor Coquillette confirmed that because this would be a technical and conforming amendment, it was not necessary to publish it for public comment. On the other hand, failure to publish now with the Rule 49 proposal might lead to some confusion and produce comments suggesting the need for such an amendment. Publication would make it clear that the Committee was aware that its proposed amendment to Rule 49 would require this technical and conforming amendment. Under these circumstances, the reporters recommended publication.

The Committee voted unanimously to approve and transmit the proposed amendment to Rule 45(c) to the Standing Committee with the recommendation that it be published for public comment.

Judge Kethledge presented the report of the Rule 12.4 Subcommittee. The current rule, he explained, provides that if an organization is a victim, the government must file a statement identifying the victim; if the organizational victim is a corporation, the government must file a statement identifying any parent corporation and any publicly held corporation that owns more than 10% of the victim corporation's stock, or stating that there is no such corporation. Prior to 2009, the Code of Judicial Conduct treated any victim entitled to restitution as a party, and the committee note stated that the purpose of the disclosures required by Rule 12.4 is to assist judges in determining whether to recuse. In 2009, however, the Code of Judicial Conduct was amended. It no longer treats any victim who may be entitled to restitution as a party, and it requires disclosure only when the judge has an interest "that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceedings."

In light of the amendment to the Code of Judicial Conduct, the Department of Justice asked the Committee to consider amending Rule 12.4 to restrict the scope of the government's required disclosures. It emphasized the difficulty of complying with the rule in cases with large numbers of organizational victims each of whom has sustained only a de minimus injury. The archetype, he said, was an antitrust prosecution where many victim corporations have paid a few cents more for a common product, such as a software program.

The Subcommittee agreed that the government had presented a persuasive case for bringing the rule in line with the change in the Code of Judicial Conduct in order to relieve the government of the burden of disclosure in such de minimus cases.

In drafting the language of its proposed amendment, the Subcommittee responded to feedback Judge Molloy had received from the Standing Committee. Standing Committee members stressed the importance of retaining judicial control. If the rule is to be revised, the court, not the government, should decide whether disclosure was needed in individual cases.

The Subcommittee recommended an amendment relieving the government of the burden of making the disclosures when it can show "good cause" for that relief. This standard, Judge Kethledge explained, retains judicial control and allows the court to balance the burden of disclosure against the risks of non-disclosure. Under a good cause standard, the court makes a holistic determination, rather than looking solely at the harm to the corporate victim.

The style consultants objected that "good cause" was a vague standard, but Judge Kethledge stated the Subcommittee strongly disagreed and viewed the matter as one of substance rather than mere style. Courts have a great deal of experience with the good cause standard, which is used in many other Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. In contrast, the standard suggested by the style consultants—“minor harm”—is not used in any other Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure, it is not used in the Code of Judicial Conduct, and it would not allow the court to look at the overall balance of the burden of disclosure against the risks of non-disclosure.

Professor Beale stated that similar language was under consideration by the Appellate Rules Committee; the reporter for that committee had consulted with the Criminal Rules reporters and participated in the Subcommittee’s telephone conferences. However, the Appellate Rules provision concerning disclosures regarding corporate victims was a small part of a larger project which was not yet ready for presentation to the Standing Committee. She noted that the current draft under consideration by the Appellate Rules Committee included not only corporations, but also other “publicly held entities.” Noting that the reporters were not sure precisely what that phrase would include, she asked if Judge Kethledge or others had a view on whether similar language should be added to Rule 12.4. Judge Kethledge stated that he had no strong view. Speaking for the Department of Justice, Ms. Morales stated that the Department was satisfied with the proposal as it stood, without that phrase.

Judge Kethledge then turned to the proposed amendment to Rule 12.4(b), explaining that it was a modest proposal that had merit but likely would not have advanced on its own. But if we do amend Rule 12.4, it would be useful to set a fixed time for the disclosures, and to make it clear that not only changed, but also new information should be disclosed. In response to a member’s comment that the rules now generally state time in multiples of seven, Judge Kethledge and the reporters took this as a friendly amendment. Although 30 days falls just over the line into the longer time periods that do not have to be divisible by seven, it seemed desirable to revise the time period here to 28 days.

A member also expressed concern with the wording of the Subcommittee’s proposed amendment to Rule 12.4, because it did not explicitly state that new information must be disclosed only if it falls within the scope of the disclosures required by the rule. Although that is implied, lawyers might argue for a broader interpretation. Members suggested various formulations, and a motion was made to revise (b) to require the government to provide a supplemental statement “if the party learns of any additional required information or any required information changes.” The motion also contained the friendly amendment making the time for filing 28 days after the defendant’s initial appearance. The motion passed unanimously. Professor Beale reminded the Committee that this language was subject to revision by the style consultants.

The Committee then unanimously approved the proposed amendment to Rule 12.4, as amended, for transmission to the Standing Committee with the recommendation that it be published for public comment.

Discussion then turned to the proposed committee note. Members suggested deleting two phrases—“in relevant cases” and “the government alleges.” Judge Kethledge agreed that they were not necessary, and accepted those suggestions on behalf of the Subcommittee. The proposed committee note was also revised to refer to 28, rather than 30, days.

The Committee voted unanimously to approve the committee note to Rule 12.4, as amended, for transmittal to the Standing Committee with the recommendation that it be published for public comment.

Following the lunch break, the reporters presented language amending the committee note to take account of the change in subsection (a)(3)(B) of the amendment to Rule 49. The proposed language stated that “(A) provides that electronic service is not effective if the serving party learns that neither “the notice of electronic filing” nor the paper to be served reached the person to be served.”<sup>5</sup>

The Committee voted unanimously to approve the committee note to Rule 49, as amended, for transmittal to the Standing Committee with the recommendation that it be published for public comment.

Judge Dever, chair of the Rule 15 Subcommittee, informed the Committee that the Department of Justice had withdrawn its request for consideration of an amendment to address the inconsistency between the text of the rule and the committee note regarding the expenses of certain depositions requested by the defense. Ms. Morales explained that the Department was withdrawing its proposal because there had been so few instances in which the rule might create a problem that it did not seem possible to show a need for a rules change at this time. However, the Department intended to return to the Committee if it confronted a problem in a significant number of cases.

Introducing the next item on the agenda, Judge Molloy explained that, with the aid of a study prepared by the Federal Judicial Center (FJC), the Committee on Court Administration and Management (CACM) had studied the problem of threats and harm to cooperating defendants, and had endorsed recommendations that would necessitate changes in the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. After discussion at the January 2016 meeting of the Standing Committee, the matter was referred to the Criminal Rules Committee. Judge Molloy then appointed a subcommittee, chaired by Judge Lewis Kaplan, to consider the FJC study and CACM’s recommendations.

Judge Kaplan reported on the Subcommittee’s actions and sought input from members who are not on the Subcommittee. The starting point for the Subcommittee is that CACM concluded, based on the FJC study, that there is a national problem with cooperators being identified and then either the cooperator being threatened or harmed, or the cooperator’s family being threatened or harmed, or others being deterred from cooperating. The FJC determined that to some degree the information used to identify these cooperators comes from court documents.

<sup>5</sup> Because the change to the proposed text of the rule that prompted this amendment to the note was later deleted, this change to the proposed Committee Note was deleted as well. See note 4, supra.

Accordingly, CACM concluded that a uniform national measure, including changes to the rules and a great deal of sealing, was required. CACM felt sufficiently strongly that it recommended these procedures be adopted as an interim measure by local district rules. The recommendations seek to prevent the identification of cooperators by making all plea agreements look identical, requiring every agreement to include an unsealed portion and a sealed portion that contains either the cooperation agreement or a statement that there is no cooperation agreement. Similarly, the minutes of all plea proceedings would also contain a sealed portion for any discussion of cooperation. Thus if someone examines the court records, there is no indication which cases involved cooperation.

After receiving CACM's recommendations, the FJC study, and a background memorandum from the reporters, the Subcommittee held a lengthy and productive telephone conference to get the initial reaction of members. Judge Kaplan summarized the Subcommittee discussion. First, there was agreement that any retaliation against cooperators is very serious, and the Committee should think very hard about any measures that would address it. However, other institutions, especially the Department of Justice and Bureau of Prisons, also have a role to play. Subcommittee members also voiced a variety of concerns and raised many questions:

- How widespread is the problem? The FJC study provided anecdotal evidence concerning 400-600 instances of harm or threats, but approximately 10,000 defendants receive credit for cooperation each year.
- To what extent would the cooperators be identified even if the sealing recommendations were followed? In other words, would the recommendation solve the problem?
- What impact would the CACM recommendations have on the defense function? The defense relies on research regarding cooperation to impeach and to argue for proportional sentencing.

The Subcommittee concluded by asking the reporters to gather additional information on the following questions:

- How big is the problem compared to the universe of cooperators?
- Do identifiable classes of cases account for most of the incidents?
- Are there important geographic variations?
- How does the incidence of problems compare with the widely varied approaches taken in different districts?

The reporters were also asked to prepare a memorandum on the First Amendment issues raised by CACM's recommendations. Judge Kaplan noted that in his circuit the court of appeals has severely restricted sealing practices.

Before the Subcommittee's next telephone conference in July, further information will be gathered from the FJC and the Department of Justice. The Subcommittee asked the Department of Justice for its position regarding CACM's interim and long term proposals and requested additional information about the Department's practices.

Judge Kaplan then asked Committee members for their initial thoughts about the problem and CACM's recommendations.

Many members agreed that retaliation against cooperators is a serious problem, and that the Committee had a responsibility to consider potential solutions. One member described it as a moral obligation to do whatever we can to protect cooperators and not to implement or maintain procedures that could discourage cooperators. Another member noted that although he was not generally in favor of sealing, courts now seal for reasons such as the protection of trade secrets. Preventing harm to cooperators is certainly at least as pressing a reason for sealing. If our records are being used, we have to figure out what we can do to be part of the solution.

But members also raised a variety of concerns and questions about CACM's proposals.

Several members spoke of the need for more information about the scope of the problem and the degree to which it arises from court records. Several members noted that violent threats to cooperators were much more likely in certain kinds of cases (such as cases involving gangs, drugs, terrorism, and organized crime) than in white collar prosecutions. There may also be differences among districts. A member noted that in sparsely settled areas everyone knows who is cooperating, and sealing would have no effect. Members also expressed the need for more information about the connection between the records that could be sealed and the potential for threats and harm. One member stated that criminal defendants and inmates are resourceful, and they have many different ways to identify cooperating defendants without court records, including continuances, absences at status hearings, and Rule 35 motions. Other members agreed that it would be important to determine whether the recommended procedures would make a big difference in reducing threats and harm to cooperators. Members noted, however, that this will be difficult to determine for many reasons. Although we can identify cooperators who have been threatened or harmed, the threat or harm may have been the result of some interaction in the prison, not the cooperation. Similarly, family members may not know the reason for a threat or assault. It will be difficult to be certain how helpful a rule change would be.

A member noted that the experience in that member's district raised questions about the causal connection between sealing and threats/harm: that member's circuit was among those that most severely restricted sealing, but the member's district also had one of the lowest rates of threats/harm to cooperators.

Lawyer members expressed concern about the effect of CACM's proposal on their ability to represent their clients effectively. A member who represents both cooperating and non-cooperating defendants described various ways sealing would hamper the defense.

- Sealing would make it impossible to research disparity in sentencing. In the member's district, failure to conduct that research constitutes ineffective assistance of counsel.

- Sealing would make counseling clients much more difficult.
- Sealing would hamper the ability to challenge racial disparities.
- Sealing would limit access to exculpatory material, even when prosecutors try in good faith to comply with Brady.

Another lawyer member noted that there may be a serious problem of retaliatory threats/harm in certain kinds of cases, such as terrorism or gang cases, but a national rule requiring sealing in all cases would also make it more difficult to effectively represent defendants in white collar cases, which present no threat of violent retaliation.

A member agreed that the Committee would need to determine how much the current rules are contributing to the problem of threats/harm; consider whether a rules change could solve the problem; and address objections including ineffective assistance of counsel, Brady, and the First Amendment.

Another member added other issues that should be explored. The first is a comparing the effectiveness of sealing to other alternatives that might address the problem. It would be important to know if sealing would make a significant difference. Second, it would be helpful to understand exactly what the FJC counted as physical harm in order to gauge the seriousness of the problem.

A member who had participated in CACM's deliberations stated that the FCJ study and the findings made by Judge Clark after an evidentiary hearing demonstrated the existence of a problem. The member noted that CACM had raised many of the same questions now being asked by the Committee. It is important to determine the prevalence of the problem of threats/harm to cooperators and whether it is limited to certain kinds of cases or geographic areas. It would also be very helpful to have information about the experience of cooperating defendants from the District of Maryland, which already follows the procedures CACM is recommending. Has it solved the problem?

The Department of Justice representatives, Ms. Shapiro and Ms. Morales, stated that the Department has not determined its position on the CACM proposals for interim rules in the district courts and changes in the Rules of Criminal Procedure. Ms. Shapiro was a member of the privacy subcommittee of the Standing Committee, which held the Fordham conference in 2010. At that time the Department was unable to reach an internal consensus on the best approach. It surveyed the districts at that time and is updating that survey now. In 2010, practices in the districts varied, and judges in each district were committed to their own practices and thought them most effective.

Ms. Morales expressed the view that it would be very difficult to trace particular harms/threats to rules that could be amended. Even if we can identify cooperators who have been harmed, we won't know why they were injured. It could have been because of a dispute in the prison. We can identify the individuals who get Rule 35 or 5K sentencing reductions for cooperation, but they are only a subset of the cooperators. Many other individuals may have cooperated at some point, but not to the degree necessary to get a Rule 35 or 5K reduction. So it will be hard to get enough information to feel comfortable that we can assess the impact of the current rules or of changes in the rules.

Professor Coquillette emphasized Judge Sutton's hope that the Subcommittee and the full Committee will take a broad view of the issue. If the Committee determines that it is not a problem that can be solved by amending the rules, it would be beneficial for it to remain engaged, be aware of what is being studied and considered by other constituencies, and be as helpful as possible.

Margaret Williams, who was one of the authors of the FJC report prepared for CACM, was present at the meeting and was asked to comment. She stated that the FJC data would permit an analysis of whether the frequency of threats/harms varies from district to district. But the FJC's data will not answer other issues that have been raised. The survey did not ask about the types of cases in which there had been threats/harm (though some respondents volunteered that information). As noted by a member, Maryland has sealing procedures like those recommended by CACM, but those procedures were already in place at the time of the FJC's study. So the FJC its data would not permit a "before and after" analysis of the effect of sealing.

Judge Kaplan thanked the members for their responses, and commented that it was likely there would be a lot of unknowns at the end of the Subcommittee's work.

The Committee turned next to new suggested amendments.

Professor Beale briefly described 15-CR-D, from Sai, which proposed multiple changes: (1) redaction of the last four digits of social security numbers in pleadings; (2) sealing of affidavits in support of applications for appointed counsel; (3) providing unpublished materials cited in pleadings to pro se litigants; and (4) electronic filing for pro se litigants. The suggestion had been addressed to all of the rules committees. The other committees had already held their spring meetings, and Professor Beale explained the actions they had taken.

Regarding the proposal to redact the last four digits of individual social security numbers, Professor Beale reported that the other committees had all agreed that the Rules Committees should not take this issue up. Rather, it should be referred to the Committee for Court Administration and Management, which made the policy decision reflected in the current rules, and is in the best position to do research and consider tradeoffs. Professor Beale noted that she and Professor King recommended that the Committee take the same approach.

With regard to the sealing of affidavits, Professor Beale noted that the Civil Rules Committee was not, at this time, moving forward with this suggestion. A member noted, however, that applications for appointments under the Criminal Justice Act are already filed ex parte under seal. So on the criminal side, no further action is needed.

With regard to requiring litigants to provide copies of unpublished opinions to pro se litigants, the Civil Rules Committee had decided not to move forward at this time. This may be a good practice, but is not necessarily something that should be mandated in a national rule.

Finally, with regard to the question whether pro se litigants should be permitted to file electronically using the CM/ECF system, that proposal was at odds with the Committee's decision to preclude such filing in the proposed amendment to Rule 49 absent a court order or local rule.

After a brief discussion, the Committee concurred in the decision to refer the question of the last four digits of Social Security numbers to CAMC, and it decided to take no further action on the other proposals.

The next suggestion, 15-CR-E, from Robert Miller, also proposed that indigent parties be allowed to file in the CM/ECF system. Judge Molloy and Professor Beale agreed that like 15-CR-D, this proposal had been considered and rejected by the Committee's action in approving the current proposal to amend Rule 49.

The next suggestion, 15-CR-F, came from Judge Richard Wesley, who drew a conflict in the cases construing Rule 5(d) of the Rules Governing § 2255 Proceedings to the Committee's attention. The Rule states that "The moving party may submit a reply to the respondent's answer or other pleading within a time fixed by the judge." Some courts have held that the inmate who brings the 2255 action has no right to file a reply, but may do so only if permitted by the court. Other courts (and the committee note) treat this as a right.

Professor Beale solicited the advice of the style consultants on language that might respond to this split and clarify that the rule was intended to create a right to file. She noted that the consultants thought the rule's current language clearly creates a right, and there should be no need to clarify the language. But confronted by the split in the lower courts, they did suggest some language that might be employed to make this clearer.

Professor King noted the 2255 caseload is very heavy in some districts and courts must process these cases quickly. She surmised that the courts that ruled an inmate has no right to file may have been looking at pre-2004 precedents without realizing that the rule was modified in 2004 to provide for a right to reply. She summed up the reasons in favor of putting this proposal on the Committee's agenda for further study:

- A rule is causing a problem. Inmates in some courts are not being given the opportunity to file a reply as intended by the 2004 revision.
- Although the style consultants believe the text is clear now, the split in the lower courts demonstrates that courts are not finding it to be clear.
- The decisions not recognizing the right to file a response may seriously affect inmates who may have a persuasive response but are not permitted to file it.

Professor King acknowledged that we do not know precisely how many cases would be affected by a clarification of the rule. However, the suggestion did come to the Committee from a member of the Standing Committee, which indicated that the Standing Committee might be receptive if the Criminal Rules Committee considered an amendment.

Judge Molloy informed the Committee of his intention to form a subcommittee to address Rule 5(d), and members were invited to make comments that might be helpful to it. Professor King noted that one issue for the subcommittee would be whether there was also a need to clarify the 2254 Rules. Another issue was whether the rule should specify a presumptive time for the filing of a reply. In 2004, the Committee felt there was no reason not to permit an inmate to file a reply to the government's response. But the Committee chose not to set a presumptive time for filing. The style consultants questioned this omission, noting that other rules specify time limits for filing.

Members discussed their practices concerning the time for filing a reply in 2255 cases. Several members set a briefing schedule giving the government 28 days to respond to the petition, and the inmate 21 or 28 days to respond. One judge who set such a schedule noted that he had never turned down a request for an extension of time. Several other members noted they typically set similar schedules: 28 days for the government and 28 for the respondent.

Later in the meeting, Judge Molloy announced that he was appointing the following to serve on the Rule 5 Subcommittee:

Judge Kemp, chair
Ms. Brook
Judge Dever
Justice Gilbertson
Mr. Hatten
Judge Hood
Ms. Morales (Department of Justice)

The next suggestion, 16-CR-A, came from James Burnham, who proposed that Rule 12(b)(3)(B)(v) be amended to make it clear that the standard for the dismissal of a criminal indictment is the same as the standard for the dismissal of a civil complaint under Civil Rule 12(b)(6). Professor Beale commented that the proposal presents the policy question whether criminal practice should be brought closer to the civil model.

A member who said he was "intrigued" by the proposal presented a recent example. Several elderly men had cut through several levels of security fences to gain entry to a nuclear facility, where they prayed. They did no other harm to the facility. After they refused to plead to a more minor offense, the government added a more serious charge that required an intent to harm the national defense. The defendant's conviction was reversed on appeal. The appellate court held that as a matter of law the facts established by the prosecution could not prove the necessary intent, and thus did not constitute sabotage. Although the appellate court concluded that the conduct in question did not, as a matter of law, constitute the offense charged, at the trial court level there had been a jury trial and a lengthy sentencing hearing. The member, who noted that there is a slight difference in the language of the civil and criminal rules, acknowledged that he did not know whether there are also significant differences in the pleading rules in criminal and civil cases.

Judge Molloy observed that the pleading practices are set by the appellate rulings holding that an indictment is sufficient if it states the date and parallels the language of the offense that has been charged.

Another member expressed interest in the proposal but thought it was unlikely to be adopted. He noted that a mechanism to raise claims already exists. As amended in 2014, Rule 12 of the Rules of Criminal Procedure provides for a pretrial motion to challenge “a defect in the indictment or information, including . . . failure to state an offense.” But circuit law determines what constitutes failure to state an offense. The Second Circuit will uphold a conviction if the proof is sufficient and not inconsistent with the indictment, which may be bare bones.

A member responded that minimal pleading in criminal cases is hundreds of years old, not something new. This looks like a proposal to return to the old common law pleading rules. He is sympathetic to the problem this poses for defendants, but it’s a problem about the pleading standards.

A judge member stated that with indictments stated in broad general terms and very limited pretrial discovery he does have occasional cases in which defense counsel at the pretrial conference says that he or she still does not know what the defendant is being accused of. The issue is closely connected to discovery. The member expressed interest in exploring the question whether the government could be required to be more specific at some point: if not at the outset, then at some point before trial.

Speaking for the Department of Justice, Ms. Morales said that the Supreme Court has ruled that the pretrial notice requirements are met by an indictment issued by a grand jury. This proposal seeks to create new substantive rights, which is beyond the authority of the Rules Committee.

Judge Molloy asked whether Mr. Burnham’s objections could be met by a rules change, or were really objections to how the courts have interpreted the rule. Two members responded. One noted that Burnham had proposed specific language to amend Rule 12. Another said this was not really a proposal about changing the language of Rule 12, and that it sought a substantive change that would raise issues under the Rules Enabling Act.

A member described how the rule works in cases brought under RICO, where the government is alleging a pattern of racketeering activity that may extend over a decade or more. According to the precedents, the government can meet the pleading requirements and avoid pretrial dismissal of the indictment with language paralleling the statute defining the offense and the dates involved. Prosecutors have an incentive to do that in order to avoid post trial claims of some variance between the allegations in the indictment and the proof.

Some members returned to the idea that this is a sufficiency of the pleading issue. One stated that although Rule 7(c) requires a “plain, concise, and definite statement of the offense charged,” the level of detail that courts accept in criminal cases is less than that required in civil cases. Another member stated that it appears more conclusory language is allowed in criminal than in civil cases.

A member stated that he was not in favor of moving forward with the proposal. He stated it would have significant implications of requiring more specificity for terrorism cases. The Department of Justice is reluctant to provide a high level of specificity in the charging documents that might reveal intelligence means and methods. During the pretrial period, under the Classified Information Procedure Act (CIPA), more specifics are provided in a manner that protects national security. Moreover, the proposal would invite in criminal cases the kind of costly, repetitive, and lengthy pretrial motions practice that now occurs in some kinds of civil cases, including big financial cases, antitrust cases, and securities class actions. If a judge needs to take control of a case to get to the core, the judge has ample tools to do so now.

Judge Molloy announced that he did not intend to set up a Subcommittee to pursue the proposed amendment to Rule 12.

Professor Beale presented 16-CR-B, from the National Association of Defense Lawyers (NACLD) and the New York Council of Defense Lawyers (NYCDL), which proposes that Rule 16 be amended to impose additional disclosure obligations on the government in complex cases. NACDL and NYCDL assert that prosecutorial discovery is a problem in complex cases that involve “millions of pages of documentation,” “thousands of emails,” and “more gigabytes of information.” They based their proposal on orders frequently issued by courts in the Southern and Eastern Districts of New York. It provides a standard for defining a “complex case” and steps to create reciprocal discovery.

At Judge Molloy’s request, the reporters briefly described the history of other attempts to amend Rule 16 to require the government to provide additional pretrial discovery. Professor Beale noted that proposals to amend Rule 16 have been defeated in the Criminal Rules Committee, in the Standing Committee, at the Judicial Conference, and in Congress. She reminded the Committee that the Rules Enabling Act process is, by design, conservative: it sets up multiple points at which a controversial proposal may be stopped. She also noted that the Department of Justice had strongly opposed amendments to Rule 16, but had itself implemented many non-rule solutions, including amendments to the U.S. Attorneys’ Manual. She reminded the Committee that 18 U.S.C. § 3500 imposes serious limits on certain forms of pretrial disclosure and reflects many of the interests the Department was seeking to protect in its advocacy in the rules process. She briefly described two attempts to amend the rule during her time as reporter. The first time, after the Department took the unusual step of inviting Committee members to participate in its efforts to revise the U.S. Attorneys’ Manual as an alternative to revising Rule 16, a sharply divided Committee approved an amendment that was rejected by the Standing Committee. The second time, responding to a letter from Judge Sullivan after the Stevens prosecution, the Committee asked the Federal Judicial Center (FJC) to survey the views of judges, defense lawyers, and prosecutors concerning the need for an amendment. The responses from judges were sharply split, and the Committee, despite a great deal of effort, was unable to formulate a beneficial revision to Rule 16 that would not run afoul of 18 U.S.C. § 3500. Accordingly, the Committee pursued other alternatives, working with the Benchbook committee to encourage judges to supervise discovery.

Ms. Hooper, one of the FJC researchers who conducted the discovery study, stated that the survey found that district judges were evenly split on whether they perceived a problem with prosecutorial failure to disclose exculpatory evidence, 90% of defense lawyers perceived a problem, and prosecutors did not perceive a problem.

Judge Molloy asked whether the judicial members had standing orders similar to the NACDL/ NYCDL proposal. One judge member stated that although he had presided over many cases that would fall within the proposal, he did not have a standing order because every case is different. In a complex case, the trial judge has to require the government to make expedited discovery (which varies depending on the case) so that the defense has adequate time to absorb. Also, if the government has the information in a form that will facilitate the defense getting into it, it must be provided in that format, e.g., hard drives in a certain format. He has ordered CJA funds for technical people to organize the electronically stored information for the defense.

The member expressed the view that it is hard to legislate wisdom for trial judges. The trial judge must get into the case far enough to determine what's required for that case. And it's not appropriate to force a case with a huge amount of documents and witnesses to trial on the normal schedule. Experienced judges understand without being told, or given specific overbroad definitions. In some cases in which enormous quantities of information may be produced, but only a tiny fraction of that material will be relevant.

Other judicial members agreed that these issues are handled by judges on a case-by-case basis, and that it was not clear whether there was a need for rules and metrics. As the case proceeds, defendants and issues may be dropped and what could have been a complex case is no longer.

A practitioner member whose practice regularly includes complex cases responded that courts don't understand the defense perspective, and how hard it is for the defense in cases with, for example, 100,000 taped conversations, to identify specific pieces of evidence that are relevant to the government's theory and to your own case. The only way this can work is for the government to identify the data it will rely on to prove its case. He agreed, however, with the premise that no one-size-fits-all rule works for all cases. But many judges now take a one-size-fits-all approach, and that approach is simply to follow Rule 16. The Rule needs an escape clause for a small set of cases that require special treatment, not a routine application of Rule 16. Although the member did not agree with every provision in the NACDL/NYCDL proposal (which was more like a regulation than a rule), the main point is that an amendment is needed for this subset of cases because some judges continue to apply Rule 16 in complex cases without any adjustment, which makes it impossible to mount a defense and forces defendants to plead guilty. The member reiterated that some judges do not understand what the defense must do in these cases, so they seek to move their dockets and are reluctant to impose a burden on the government.

The member advocated for something “simple” that would recognize a category of complex cases that require different treatment (e.g., requiring the government to identify its exhibits in advance) and allow the defense adequate time for preparation, but also require reciprocal defense discovery. The member was more concerned at this point about the concept of what is needed—special class of cases requiring special procedures—than the specifics.

Another member opposed moving forward with the proposal, because it was better to leave this to the discretion of judges than to try to legislate with the rules. He emphasized that the complexity of cases can vary on multiple dimensions, particularly the nature of the case and the makeup of the defense team (which could be two local lawyers or 50 lawyers in three law firms in different countries). He also predicted that the Department of Justice would strongly oppose the proposal because of the impact it could have in national security cases. He favored leaving this to judicial discretion, which is more flexible than a rule.

Another member urged consideration of the impact of complex cases on CJA lawyers, who do not have the resources of Federal Defender offices, noting that judges are not familiar with the situation CJA lawyers face in complex cases. The member strongly supported the creation of a subcommittee to try to develop an approach that would preserve judicial discretion but send a signal to judges to modify procedures in complex cases.

Speaking for the Department of Justice, Ms. Morales first stated that the Department distinguished between the current proposal and more general prior attempts to modify Rule 16. But the Department still does not think a rule is the best way to deal with these issues. The Department has worked hard with the defense bar to develop guidance for judges on electronic discovery, which led to a pocket guide. That kind of collaboration is nimble and can change quickly as the technology changes. Technology is a moving target. The Department favors a focus on developing best practices and guidance, not specific prescriptive rules.

A member agreed this is a significant issue, and is related to the broader issue of electronic data and discovery, which is being studied by another committee. That committee has been conducting hearings, and has heard repeatedly of the problems encountered by individual CJA lawyers, who lack the knowledge and resources of the Federal Defenders. He noted, however, that it was not yet clear whether this problem is a rules problem.

Judge Molloy announced the appointment of a Rule 16 Subcommittee to study the proposal and the more general issue:

Judge Kethledge, chair

Mr. Filip
Judge Feinerman
Mr. Kerr
Ms. Morales, for the Department of Justice
Mr. Siffert

Professor Beale introduced the last agenda item. She explained that in bankruptcy cases there are routine filings of containing large amounts of personal data that should be redacted. In some cases, a failure to redact has been discovered. Although bankruptcy courts have general taken action to redact material in such cases, the Bankruptcy Committee thought it would be desirable to add a rule providing for such retroactive redaction. When the Bankruptcy Committee presented this to the Standing Committee as an information item, the Standing Committee encouraged the Civil, Criminal, and Appellate Committees to consider whether a similar rule would beneficial.

The issue was being presented at this meeting to get members' initial reactions, with the expectation that it would be on the fall agenda for a more extended discussion. Professor Beale asked for initial reactions on several questions. Had members encountered cases in which information that should have been redacted was filed in a criminal case? If so, did they think a rules change to deal with those cases would be beneficial? And if members had not encountered the problem, might it be beneficial to adopt a rules change to parallel the Bankruptcy rule? This would provide a mechanism to deal with the few cases that might arise in the future, and would avoid the negative implication that might arise from a comparison with the Bankruptcy Rule authorizing retroactive redaction.

Several members said they had encountered failure to redact material in a few cases. In each case the court or the party that failed to make the required redaction took corrective action. In some cases the clerk of court restricted access to a document while corrective action was taken. Professor Beale summed up the responses: failure to redact as required by Rule 49.1 does occur occasionally in criminal cases, and courts have been dealing with it successfully. One judge expressed an interest, if a retroactive redaction procedure is developed, to include a requirement of an explanation of the failure to make the redaction and/or to discover the failure in a timely fashion. Professor Beale stated that the reporters would collaborate with their colleagues on the other committees on these issues. They would consider the argument that a rule providing guidance would be valuable, but also the fact that the issue arises only infrequently and courts have been dealing with it successfully.

Finally, Judge Molloy noted the next meeting of the Committee will be September 19-20 in Missoula, Montana. His tentative plan is to meet in the fall of 2017 in Chicago, and perhaps in New York in the fall of 2018. The next two spring meetings be in Washington, D.C.,

The meeting was adjourned.
